

DESPRECIO

LATITUDE  $18^{\circ} 31.6'$  N. (ESTIMATED)LONGITUDE  $89^{\circ} 16.4'$  W. (ESTIMATED)

The ruins comprise a low irregular platform with construction on the north, west, and south sides, indicated by either mounds or sections of exposed masonry (fig. 99). Portions of faced walls along the south side define a single series of two rooms. The building on the west consists of two parallel ranges of chambers. The exterior west wall, the best preserved, rises from a plain podium to a height of 3.75 m. where a 20-cm. molding overhangs 10 cm. (pl. 33*b*). The masonry is of large stones now much weathered. Three holes worked in the stones appear similar to those in the back wall of the west range at Pared de los Reyes. One is partially filled with plaster and a spall. The vault stones are large slabs.